Technology available to teachers, students, and staff is changing day by day. The effective administrator must be able to lead a school's technology program in order to provide an efficient and progressive educational system. To lead in the technology world of apps, iPads, smart phones, etc. it is imperative that the school administrator be able to demonstrate technology competencies. The Nebraska Council of School Administrators (NCSA) continues to assist school leaders in supporting and promoting the increased use of technology in all facets of the school. Last year NCSA partnered with the Educational Service Units Technology Affiliate Group (TAG) to provide opportunities for professional growth for administrators by offering the first NCSA Technology Boot Camp. As a result of the success of Technology Boot Camp I, NCSA and TAG are pleased to provide Technology Boot Camp II. We encourage all school administrators to continue to develop expertise and technology competencies and strongly consider your attendance at a Technology Boot Camp II near you.

During these boot camps the TAG group will cover:

- Maximizing Google calendar and other scheduling tools to better manage your time
- Using Evernote to remember everything, capture anything, access anywhere and find things fast
- More apps, more tools, more know-how for iPads and smart phones
- Information on how to use technology to communicate with parents and staff
- And much more.
